Results of microbiological analysis are unobjectionable regarding the tests carried out.

Regarding the determined levels of lead, cadmium and mercury, the sample complies with the maximum levels for food supplements laid down in Regulation (EU) 2023/915 (Cat. 3.1.28; 3.2.21; 3.3.2).

The deviation of the vitamin B6 and zinc content from the declared value is outside the tolerance specified in the Guidance Document of the EU Commission (cf. Guidance document of the EU Commission with regard to the setting of tolerances for nutrient values declared on a label in food supplements from December 2012). According to this recommendation in the case of a deviation from the tolerance range various aspects have to be taken into account which have an influence on the extent of possible sanctions and a potential risk of misleading the consumer. These include amongst others the extent and nature of the deviation (too much or too little of the nutrient in question), the homogeneity of the product, and other matrix-specific factors for the nutrient (degradation rates, analytical variability, and others). In our opinion, taken into account the aforementioned aspects, a risk of consumers being misled is not yet given in the present case. However, it is pointed out that a
